QEW Celebrates Community at Spring Steering Committee Meeting
“Given that we are Quaker Earthcare Witness in these times, what is asked of us?” This query laid the foundation for QEW’s Spring Steering Committee Meeting at Atlanta Friends Meeting April 20-22. “We came together to support each other and continue to inspire each other,” reflects QEW’s General Secretary Shelley Tanenbaum.

On Friday night, we visited with three local Atlanta climate activists, including Reverend Dr. Gerald Durley, a long-time civil rights leader who has now turned his faithful action toward the environment. He reminded us that “God gave us a powerful and ecologically balanced world” and we are its stewards. He then challenged us with a powerful message: “Climate Change is an equal opportunity destroyer. What are you going to sacrifice? What are you going to risk?”

Friends Help Ban Fracking in Maryland [1]
REPORT BACK: QEW Marches & Lobbies for Climate, Jobs, and Justice in D.C. [2]
Support for Earthcare and QEW [3]
Ecological Living at Quaker Retirement Community [5]
Environmental Author Cynthia Barnett Talks to QEW [7]
May We Rise up From the Earth [8]
Relocalization Among the Most Marginalized in an “America First” World [9]
Tweet [10]